COOKIE LAW

Cookies on this website

This page provides more information on what cookies are exactly what cookies are used by this site and how you can influence cookies.

What are cookies?

A cookie is a piece of text that is given to a visiting browser by a web server in the hope and expectation that the browser rendering follow-up visit.

The cookie is a supplement to the HTTP specification. The Hypertext Transfer Protocol is used by everyone who visits a website: it controls the communication between a web server and a browser. It is not designed to consecutive pages look like to see a whole. Therefore it is not readily possible to retrieve follow-up visit data or settings.

In order to still allow the cookie and set-cookie headers for HTTP in 1997 introduced . This specification was last updated in April 2011 and is currently going through life as RFC 6265 HTTP State Management Mechanism .

How cookies work?

Contrary to what politicians sometimes argue, cookies themselves no utilities and no files, and is technically not stored on the visitor's computer by the web server. The latter browser can decide all by itself. Eventually, cookies are often saved as a file, but a Web server can not force a browser to save or return at a later visit actually cookies.

A cookie is always tied to a specific domain or subdomain. Examples of a domain and a subdomain are, for example: website.nl and mooie.website.nl.

Cookies are therefore only returned to the same domain, and where they come from. Thus you sure only the servers of this website receive cookies that were previously obtained from this website. Also through javascript can only be accessed on the website until the cookies placed by this website.

An important point of cookies is that they at all can be received HTTP request and that all known relevant cookies to each be sent request. That also applies to the requests that are retrieved images, javascript and css files for a web page. Of course, also then applied to the control domain.

First-party cookies

Cookies you for the same Domain get when you visit are called first-party cookies. When the cookies of this website viewing this page are therefore first-party cookies.

Third-party cookies is also possible that a website contains elements of third parties. Notable examples include embedded videos, ads and social media buttons. If these elements from their own servers cookies are sent, which are called third-party cookies. It is therefore possible that you will receive when visiting this site third-party cookies for Facebook.com, Youtube.com and other third party websites. Through the operation of HTTP cookies and security around is not possible for the broker to exercise the most hours of third-party cookies influence.

What other storage there for websites?

In addition to cookies, there are more possibilities for storage in the browser created since 1997. Because here hardly use is made, they are only briefly touched upon.

Flash applications have their own form of cookies, similar to HTTP. Except for capturing user preferences such as image quality and the Autoplay feature in the video player to the website does not do anything with these types of cookies. HTML5 local storage is a recent development. Web applications can make use of to - compared to cookies - free store large amounts of data. Because of limited support in browsers is not taken by this website.

Where use cookies on this website?

With cookies it is possible to recover in subsequent visit information from previous visits. If you have made certain settings and you certain site elements've seen before. Cookies that the functioning of the site to customize your needs, called functional cookies .

In addition to the site, cookies may be used to know a visitor previously been on the site. In this way statistics are collected on the use of the website. A famous example is Google Analytics. This only works with anonymous statistical information used by us to analyze the operation of the site and improve. This website currently uses Google Analytics to collect statistics.

How can I refuse cookies?

Without cookies, it is almost impossible for us to you as a visitor to give the best experience when visiting the site. That has to do with analyzing web statistics to determine how the site should look and navigate from there, but also to determine what content is popular and what is not actually read by our visitors. Although we are not required for these cookies to ask third parties permission (the responsibility lies with the third party, so for example, YouTube), we are obliged to remove the content at the time that the third party to request failed permission . This would mean that we are at the moment that even a single person complain about a picture or video that should remove for everyone, or should develop technology that enables individual users to filter individual content. This is practically almost impossible to implement.
